Dear Ray:

I want to take this opportunity to express our appreciation for the willing and able support that your organization provided us in performing the joint study on "Soviet Undeclared Ballistic Missile Production Facilities" in connection with U. S. freeze proposals.

The exercise has proved to be extremely useful to us. The end product has immediate application to many of our considerations; I believe that the analyses, research techniques, and end results are applicable to a variety of similar arms control considerations. Our people gained immeasurably in their experience and understanding of the intelligence problems associated with arms control considerations.

[REDACTED] I believe that this exercise represents an excellent example of the efficient and effective manner in which intelligence and arms control can work together in successfully engaging a problem of common concern.

Thanks for all of your support in initiating this project and in making the necessary manpower available for its completion.

Sincerely yours,

Pete
